Russbach - The Salzburg Village

RUSSBACH lies at the centre of the Dachstein West skiing and hiking region in the mountains of Salzburger Land. The small idyllic holiday resort near the Salzkammergut offers you relaxation and leisure fun with family and good friends.

Over the years, a top-class ski area has grown up to the west of the Dachstein around the villages of Gosau, Russbach and Annaberg. The unique, imposing Dachstein panorama, perfectly groomed pistes suitable for families, snowshoe trails, touring ski routes, modern lifts and a gentle approach to tourism characterise us. Very young skiers are carefully initiated into the secrets of the white magic by the Russbach ski school together with other ski beginners, while the rest of the family simply goes skiing - at its best.

Russbach is centrally located and an ideal starting point for numerous excursions. Within a radius of a few kilometres, a holiday world opens up that you must have seen! Hallstatt, the 7000-year-old World Heritage village, the festival city of Salzburg, the imperial city of Bad Ischl, breathtaking lakes, ice caves and much more.

RUSSBACH IN NUMBERS

State: Salzburg

Region Destination: Pleasure and adventure region Tennengau

Population: 784

Area: 34 km²

Altitude: 813 m

Highest mountain: Gamsfeld at 2028 m

Village history

The "Wald von Gosach" area originally belonged to the Salzburg church. The colonisation of the Alpine valleys began around 1200 and was in full swing 100 years later. In the following centuries, people lived mainly from cattle breeding, the salt trade, the charcoal trade and the timber industry.

The first tangible date is 1124, the year in which Archbishop Konrad donated the left bank of the Lammer to St Peter's Monastery while retaining the right bank himself.

In 1535, borders were drawn between Gosau and Russbach. The danger in the situation of the Russbachers was that Protestantism had gained a strong foothold on the other side of the Salzburg border. As the Catholics formed a minority, the Salzburg archbishops and archbishops and sovereigns feared that the new faith would seep in. In the course of the expulsion of Protestants in the 18th century, Russbach was given its own church.

The first verifiable settlement document for Russbach dates back to 1631, when Russbach had 404 inhabitants. It was not until 1903 that Russbach was elevated to its own municipality. Russbach also became its own parish. A new school was built in 1914. Today this is the community centre. In addition, a new economic sector developed - tourism. In 1956, a so-called tourist association was founded, followed by the construction of a swimming pool and lifts.

Legend has it that poachers used to wash the soot off their hands and faces after their outrageous deeds. The colour of the water gave the village the name "Rußbach".
